FOREWORD

Number of classrooms to be built . . . amount of investment needed for a target business . . . resource and employment opportunities to be generated . . . food supply required by for the next year. These are examples of the indicators that require population estimates periodically. As a census is held only every five or ten years, population projections are utilized by planners, policy-makers and business managers as bases for preparing rational plans, public administration and identification of target markets. Reliable population estimates are necessary to draw an accurate picture of the target populace.

The 1995 Census-Based City/Municipal Population Projections presents the projected population at the city/municipality level based on the result of the 1995 Census on Population. The methodology used in projecting the future population at the city/municipality level is presented in the first part of this monograph. The methodology for generating the city/municipal population projections was approved under National Statistical Coordination (NSCB) Resolution No.13 dated December 20, 1999. As the projections could not have accounted for some of the recent physical and spatial changes at the city/municipal levels, users are urged to review the methodology used to understand how these data were estimated. The projected population of the different cities/municipalities is presented in the second part of this monograph.

The 1995 Census-Based City/Municipal Population Projections is the third in the series of 1995-census based population projections publications produced by the National Statistics Office, with funding assistance from the United Nations Population Fund (UNFPA) Project, PHI/96/P01 – Strengthening the NSO in Providing Data for Local Planning and Development and with expert support from a Technical Advisory Group headed by world eminent demographer, Dr. Mercedes B. Concepcion. Projection of the city/municipality population utilized the ratio method, that is the proportion of the city/municipal population to the population of their respective province as observed in the previous censuses. The derived ratios were then projected on the assumption that stability in the trends will be attained after some time. If the assumption will hold reasonably well, the future population will likely be close to the projected populations presented. The national, regional and provincial population projections presented in Volume II utilized the cohort component method , that is , using estimates of fertility, mortality and migration.

This series would not have come to fruition without the cooperation of the experts from the University of the Philippines Population Institute, the National Statistical Coordination Board and the National Statistics Office who carefully formulated the assumptions and examined the results. Grateful acknowledgment also goes to the dedicated staff of the NSO Population Projections Unit who painstakingly prepared the inputs required and reviewed the outputs produced.

We enjoin you to adopt this new official set of city/municipal population projections as bases for your planning, programming and policy-making. It is hoped that the needs for accurate population estimates by both government and private sectors will be realized in this publication.

METHODOLOGY

Population Projections for Cities and Municipalities

To project populations of cities and municipalities, the ratio method, rather than the cohort component method, was utilized because of the unavailability of data on fertility, mortality and migration at the city/municipality level. The ratio method of estimating the future population of cities and municipalities makes use of the levels and trends in the ratios of the population of cities and municipalities to the population of their respective provinces observed in previous censuses. These ratios are then projected on the assumption that after some time stability will be attained.

In the present application, all cities and municipalities comprising a province were classified according to the trend of their ratios as observed in the 1970, 1980, 1990 and 1995 censuses. The four classifications are the following:

Type I - cities/municipalities that showed unidirectional trend in their ratios (either increasing or decreasing) throughout the observation period.

Type II - cities/municipalities that had unidirectional trends only during the last two intercensal periods.

Type III - cities/municipalities that had unidirectional trend only during the first two intercensal period.

Type IV - cities/municipalities with erratic trends.

For each type of city/municipality, the initial rates (r) at which the ratios will change were computed as follows:

1. For a type I city/municipality, the initial rate of change is equal to the geometric mean of the observed annual rates of change of the ratios for the three intercensal periods.

$$r = \sqrt[3]{(r_{70-80})(r_{80-90})(r_{90-95})}$$

2. For a type II city/municipality, the initial rate of change is equal to the geometric mean of the observed annual rates of change of the ratios during the last two intercensal periods.

$$r = \sqrt[2]{(r_{80-90})(r_{90-95})}$$

3. For a type III city/municipality, the initial rate of change is equal to the geometric mean of the observed annual rates of change of the ratios of the first two intercensal periods.

$$r = \sqrt[2]{(r_{70-80})(r_{80-90})}$$

4. For a type IV city/municipality, the initial rate of change is equal to one half the annual rate of change in the ratios of the last intercensal period.

$$r = \frac{r_{90-95}}{2}$$

It was assumed that for all cities/municipalities, r would gradually reduce so that they would all become zero around 95 years from the base year, which is 1995. Based on this assumption, a schedule of ratios was derived for each projection year using the following formula:

where: R_0 = ratio of the population of the city/municipality to that of the province in 1995

R_k = ratio of the population of the city/municipality to that of the province for the kth year from 1995, and r = initial rate of change in the ratios.

Projected ratios are finally adjusted such that the ratios of all cities/municipalities comprising a province sum up to 1.0.
