

City gov't, QCPD, Napolcom bare policing system

By Rio N. Araja

QUEZON City Mayor Herbert Bautista has partnered with the Quezon City Police District and National Police Commission on a community service-oriented policing system.

The system's framework is designed to promote coordination and cooperation among citizens, local executives and the integrated law enforcement and public safety agencies assigned in the community through a program and project for the maintenance of peace and order and public safety, he said.

The agreement shall take effect for two years, Bautista added.

The city government includes the convening of a peace and order council; update and approval of the craft of peace and order and public safety plan; full cooperation of all partner agencies and organizations in meetings, trainings, implementation, and monitoring, invite the National Commission on Indigenous Peoples as members observers and services be included in the plan, the mayor said.

Chief Supt. Joselito Esquivel Jr. of the QCPD shall facilitate the data gathering and planning of barangays, generate partnership with non-government organizations and communities by regular barangay visitations and intensified social awareness on crime prevention, anti-terrorism, community development and social welfare.
