QUEZON City Mayor Josefina “Joy” Belmonte will put up mini city halls in all six districts, so that residents will soon get efficient and responsive social services.

“We will decentralize our services to bring government closer to the people,” said Belmonte, adding, “each mini city hall, to the extent practicable, will provide the full complement of facilities including processing of business permits, payment of taxes, and applying for senior citizen or solo parent IDs.” Belmonte also seeks to provide affordable rental and rent-to-own options for its 188,000 informal settler families living in Quezon City’s danger zones, open spaces and private properties.
